

Reynold Cal – About Me

Reynold Cal is a Q'eqchi' Maya. He was born, grew up and lives with his wife and kids in San Miguel Village, Toledo District. He commenced his career by being a School Teacher. He taught for 4 years in the primary schools of rural Toledo but as he always says, "Everyone has a unique calling in life."

Ask Reynold about field-work... He will give you a big smile and he will explain to you heartily the challenges, hunger, fatigue but often rewarding experience. He has been in the field of Wildlife Research since 2001.

Reynold is presently the Acting Project Coordinator for Birds Without Borders / Aves Sin Fronteras; a Research Project between Belize and The Foundation for Wildlife Conservation, Wisconsin U.S.A. He is also the Manager for the Runaway Creek Nature Reserve; a critical part of The Central Belize Wildlife Corridor. He is quite knowledgeable about the avi-fauna of Belize; he conducts training in Bird Identification. He is well-versed in mist-netting and has a Sub-permit in bird banding. Reynold has been trained in the capture of big cats and the use of telemetry to track the movements of these animals. He has a lot of experience working with local and international professionals and student groups.
